

Is It Too Late to Get an In ground
Backyard Fiberglass
Swimming Pool in the Fall?

Springtime seems like the ideal time to get an in ground backyard pool, doesn't it? After all, thoughts of warmer months are usually at top of mind at this point. In most places throughout the United States, when people think of swimming and in ground backyard swimming pools, they think of summer. So, if you decide to wait until September, October, or even later to get a swimming pool, are you out of luck and have you made the craziest decision of your life? No...and no. Just because summer has packed its bags for the season doesn't mean you can't get the backyard pool of your dreams installed. Actually, getting a backyard pool in the fall has many benefits.

If you've put away your swim trunks for the season but still feel the need to take the plunge by getting a beautiful in ground fiberglass swimming pool, here are five compelling reasons to get one now. Just because the leaves are starting to fall doesn't mean you have to put your backyard pool dreams to sleep for the winter.

5 Amazing Reasons to Get a Backyard Pool in the Fall

1. The weather.

Typically speaking, when September and October roll around, most areas in the country notice a decrease in rain. The weather conditions at this time of the year are actually quite conducive to pool installations. Plus. The ground is drier and harder, thanks to the summer moisture drying up. Not only is drier soil easier to deal with for construction purposes, but it is also cleaner. This makes it easier for all that heavy machinery and trucks to get the installation completed. Further, there is less chance for damage to your lawn that you typically might get when installing a pool in wetter seasons.

2. Landscaping.

The fall is an ideal time to work on the landscape in your backyard. Most homeowners enjoy landscaping around their pool, especially after it has been installed. Sod and many shrubs, trees, and bulbs perform well when you plant them in the fall. You can get started on creating your backyard paradise now. There's no need to wait until next summer.

3. Less Anxiety and Reduced Wait Times.

Let's face it. During the summer months, pool builders are notably busy. They will have several projects going on at the same time. When you are in that rotation, you could have to wait a bit longer to get your in ground backyard fiberglass pool installed. However, if you decided to do this in the fall, your wait time could be dramatically reduced. The pool builders most likely have more time on their hands. They can quickly move your project along at a faster pace. As a result, you don't have the associated anxiety you might have if you did this in the summer. Can you imagine wanting to go for a swim, but you have to wait just a little bit longer? With your pool installed in the fall, you will be ready to go come swim season next year.

4. Be prepared.

When you install your in ground backyard pool in the fall, you have all winter and spring to prepare yourself in so many ways. First of all, you can take this time to learn how to care for your pool. Secondly, you can familiarize yourself with the pool's maintenance system. Next, you can finish up any backyard projects. And finally, you can make those final payments. Wouldn't it be great to have all of that work behind you when you are ready to race outside the backdoor to jump into your pool next summer?

5. Taxes.

While this may not be your favorite subject, it demands a bit of our attention. In many cases, an interest you spend financing your swimming pool in the current year can possibly be used as a tax write-off at the end of the year. However, we do advise you speak with a tax advisor first before making any assumptions in this regard.
